Hans has waited so long to see Grandpa and Grandma! But everytime he asks, Mama and Papa make an excuse not to go. This time, they packed up and left quickly. Why? Because something's happened: Grandpa's heart is fluttering!

Hans doesn't understand what it means to have an irregular heartbeat. But he knows this: first one is little, then big. First one is sick, then healthy again. It's just that way! At least, that's what Grandpa says. And Hans knows: Grandpa's always right.

A heartwarming tale of a special relationship, sensitively illustrated by Julie Völk. For reading aloud and as a primer.

Judith Burger was born in Halberstadt, Germany and over twenty years ago adopted Leipzig as her home. She studied theater, and now she works for MDR German radio. Her debut novel, Gertrude Beyond Borders, received rave reviews and won the Gustav Heinemann Peace Prize for Young Readers in 2019.

Hannover 1979. The bags are packed, the school is notified – Thomas, 16 years old, is literally ready at the drop of a hat to move with his family to the German Democratic Republic. The reason for the hasty move is not his terminally ill grandfather in Usedom, as his father has claimed. It is the Cold War era, rife with espionage in the East and West alike. Thomas' father is a spy whose role was uncovered in a failed mission, and who must now return to the GDR. Thomas finds himself living a false life in East Berlin. He attends a school governed by the state security agency that requires flag oaths and military instruction. All the family's attempts to return to the West fail. Then Thomas and his parents end up in the notorious state prison Bautzen II . . .

A true story by Maja Nielsen from the time of the divided Germany. Like Nielsen's successful novel THE TUNNEL CONSTRUCTOR it's dense and suspenseful.

Maja Nielsen's stories have been released as books, audiobooks, and radio features. Her hit series Adventure! with Gerstenberg Verlag has garnered numerous awards.

What does our tomcat do while I'm asleep? That's what Fritze asks one morning when her tomcat Mika comes home unusually late. Everyone she asks has a different explanation: Mika's out taking a walk, says Grandpa. Papa says Mika sings in the tomcat choir. Mama says he's out visiting. And Timmy, the babysitter, maintains that Mika is somewhere spying. Really?, thinks Fritze. None of them are cats - how do they know? What would Mika tell us? An then, Mika tells us his own story.

A book for reading and reading loud. For the whole family, and for anyone who loves cats.

Silke Lambeck grew up in Berlin. She studied German Studies and Theater Studies and ultimately became a journalist. For over ten years, she has written books for children and adults such as Herr Röslein, which got rave reviews from both readers and critics. When Julia arrives in Gross Neuendorf, August is waiting for her at the bus stop. Joyfully he tosses his hat into the air. "We'll do something special every day!" he says happily. Julia likes to sit on the bench in August's workshop watching him as he works. August tells her about earlier times - like when he was a ferryman on the river. Sometimes Tim comes to visit. Then they all go fishing. When August gets tired, Julia sits on his bed and tucks him in. Back in school, Julia's thoughts often return to August. One afternoon in October Julia and her mother return to Gross Neuendorf. Lying on the hat rack is a cross with a bow ...

A lovely story about the things that bind together the very young and the very old.

How did Willi get his name? Why does Jojo disappear at every opportunity? How come Paule is always talking with Old Hannes? And: Is Schulz really an islander, even though he comes from Berlin? Those are some of the questions asked on the tiny North Sea island where the four live. Okay, make that three, since Schulz is mostly, but not always there. All the same, they are a true gang. And there's always an adventure when they get together, whether it's spring, summer, fall or winter.

What happens to them – finding beached seals or stolen Viking treasure, or taking part in an island competition – you can read it yourself. Or have someone read it to you. Or read it to others. Ahoy!

Silke Lambeck grew up in Berlin, concentrated on German studies and Theater, and became a journalist. For more than ten years she's written widely praised books for children and adults. Her children's novel My Friend Otto, the Wild Life, and I was nominated for the German Youth Literature prize. Silke Lambeck lives with her family in Berlin.

It's shortly before midnight on February 28, 2020, and Emily is on board the Queen Mary 2, sailing toward New York. Tomorrow is her 12th birthday and the ocean crossing is her birthday present.

Suddenly, she finds herself in an entirely new place and time - on board a refugee ship in the year 1913!

The same happens to Lorenzo and Malik, who have made this trip before. They relate the news that after the ship arrives in New York, a fire will break out, killing and injuring many on board. They must prevent this catastrophe! Somehow they have to find a way to travel back in time. If there's anyone that can help, it's Albert Einstein.

A suspenseful adventure story that looks back in time to 1913, when many German citizens left everything behind to start a new life in a foreign land.

Who names their child Gertrude?! Gertrude is the new kid in Ina's class and she's different from all the other girls that Ina knows. She's got Western clothes, a smile that'll bowl you over, and the bluest eyes you've ever seen. But Gertrude is also different because her father is a poet and her family has applied for an exit visa. In the DDR of the late 70s, this meant they were enemies of the state. Not only is the school against their friendship, but Ina's mother is up in arms. Things go off the rails. What to do when you've found the friend of a lifetime but everything's so complicated? Ina and Gertrude forge a plan they call "Commando Rose" to protect their friendship against all odds.

A story about a great friendship - told with a gripping and direct poignancy.

Hamburg, summer 1939. As the Second World War looms ever closer, Henri and his friends spend a seemingly carefree summer together. They meet at the swimming pool or in the park, and someone always brings a gramophone along - and then things really heat up! Jazz music enchants the "Swingbuddies" with their relaxed "joie de vivre". But this music is a thorn in Nazi's side.

It's a dangerous dance on a volcano. One evening when Henri and his girlfriend encounter a Gestapo patrol, they find themselves caught up in a matter of life and death ...

This book, based on true stories of the Hamburg Swing Dance youth from 1939 to 1941, tells the suspenseful story of an uprising in the middle of World War II. The "Swings" were brave, uncompromising and full of life!

Berlin 1961: Things couldn't be better for Achim - he has his Abitur in the bag, a place at university is secure and Chris, the girl he secretly loves, seems to like him too. But everything changes overnight: with the building of the Wall, the GDR regime takes a tougher tone. Distrust, persecution and arrests are the order of the day. When one of his friends ends up in prison, Achim makes a difficult decision: he must get out of East Berlin and leave everyone he loves behind. Once on the other side, he does everything he can to help people escape from the GRD. Together with other helpers, he dig tunnels from West to East Berlin - in constant fear of being discovered by the Stasi and full of hope that one day he will see Chris again.

A gripping novel about the legendary tunnel escapes from the GDR, based on a true story.

"The book describe the events of the time very realistically. It is exciting and very sensitively told and brings the most exciting years of my life very close to me once again. A piece of German-German history!"

Every year in spring, the nomads stop by Soraya's village on their way to their summer home in Afghan mountains. Accompanying them is Tarek, who knows sheep better than anyone else and is a wonderful storyteller. But this year Soraya waits for him in vain. According to an old tradition, as the seventh daughter in her family, she was raised as a boy and was able to move freely and attend school. But as a 14-year-old, she has reached the age where she should be living as a girl again in the quiet of her home. In fact the Taliban has, in no uncertain terms, mandated that she do so. They have also threatened Tarek and expect him to put his excellent animal tracking abilities to work for them. The nomad's plight worsens dramatically. Tarek and Soraya can see no other way and each journey out into the world, without knowing where the other is or what they're doing. Unexpectedly, they cross paths in the mountains.

Miguel, Emilio, Jaz, Ángel, and Fernando embark on their journey. These five teenagers only just met, but they have an important goal in common: to make it across the border into the USA. None of them knows what awaits them on their trip - not even Fernando, who has done this once before. "Out of one hundred people that cross that river, barely ten make it through Chiapas, barely three to the border in the north, and only one makes it over," he explains. If they stick together, though, they might just have a chance. Ahead of them lies over 2,500 kilometers of travel as blind passengers on freight trains. Hunger, thirst, heat, and cold are their enemies, but that's not all. The freight trains are governed by their own rules and many potential dangers lurk: accidents, bandits, corrupt policemen, drug dealers, and human trafficking. Will the five teens ever reach their goal in the north?

An exciting adventure novel about five adolescents who are there for each other even in extreme situations. Based on the difficult situation in Mexico, this story grapples with a controversial issue that has also become a sad reality in Europe.

From Breckerfeld to Berlin! The 17-year-old Biko can hardly believe his luck. He actually got into the famous Artistenschule, a training academy for circus performers in Berlin! An old suitcase in the lost and found at the Artistenschule sends him 100 years back in time to a tumultuous time in Berlin – the era of the First World War, the November Revolution, and the murder of Rosa Luxemburg.

A Crime in Eden in 1919 – a genuine political crime story begins. But modern-day Berlin is also very exciting: As the son of an African, Biko is presumed to be one of the many refugees who've arrived in the city. And all of a sudden, he finds that there is much more at stake than his dream of being a performer ...

A letter for Pauline Lichtenberg! Military Mail from World War I - delivered with a delay of nearly 100 years! What seems to be an odd PR story at first turns out to be a touching journey into the past for 14-years-old Pauline. Who was her namesake Pauline to whom the love letter was addressed? Who was Wilhelm that wrote this military mail from a trench in Verdun to his fiancée back at home? And what was it all about, this World War I? Who fought against whom - and why was that?

With an investigative curiosity, Pauline is going about figuring out the secret of this letter together with her granny Lieschen. She learns about a real big love during a terrible time - and also she encounters herself newly in a very surprising way.

For Sascha, the last year of school begins. Hanging out in the condemned house and making increasingly dangerous tests of courage with his buddies: Is this what the rest of his life will look like? And then something happens. Something that shatters everything that was and calls into questions everything that can still be. To duck away further is unthinkable. Rough in the noise of the street, full of heart underneath: in his new novel, Johannes Herwig tells of a friendship that seems to be above everything, and of the difficulty of taking responsibility - for those who care about, and for yourself. What is a friendship worth and how much does responsibility weigh? The new exciting novel for young adults by Paul-Maar-Award winner Johannes Herwig.

Johannes Herwig, born 1979 in Leipzig, knew as a child that he wanted to become a writer. He studied sociology and psychology then founded a photo gallery in Dresden before he took up writing. His debut novel, Until the Stars Tremble, was nominated for the Deutscher Jugendliteraturpreis and was awarded the Paul-Maar-Preis for young writers.

Leipzig, 1936. On the first day of summer holidays, 16-year-old Harro gets into a fight with members of the Hitler Youth. He unexpectedly gets help from like-minded people who, like him, want nothing to do with the Nazi ideology. In the year that follows, everything changes for Harro. Conflicts with his parents and trouble at school, nights at campfires, political action, first love - and above all, the fear that his wild activities might have dangerous consequences.

The "Leipzig Meuten", a group of oppositional youth gangs, inspired Johannes Herwig's debut. His discussion of growing up in a dictatorship is powerful, thrilling, and emotional. The questions he poses are as applicable now as they were then: should one participate, should one quietly adjust, or should one resist?

Leipzig, 1995: The city is in an upheaval. Nino lives alone with his father and has the usual headaches of a fifteen-year-old: stress in school, first love. One day he and his best friend Max are caught shoplifting, then he's beaten up by a group of punks that one day will claim him as their own. Then comes more aggravation: conflict with his father, feelings for a girl who carries a dark secret, and daily threats from neo-Nazis that seem to be everywhere. What's more, Nino is determined to find out why his mother left him and his father behind just before the fall of the Berlin Wall.

Johannes Herwig (Until the Stars Tremble) has set against the background of German unification this raw and emotional portrait of youth in the grip of change and aimlessness. This is a story of hope.

"Sarajevo": a wonderfully soft-sounding word. Fourteen-year-old Paul happens to hear it in passing one day. But what sound to him at first like the name of a magic spell actually represents a story in the making, an event that would later go down in history as one of the greatest war tragedies of the 20th century. Paul's daily life is filled with many other emotionally charged words that stir up a passion and hunger for war. Like so many other citizens, Paul's father and brother Max sign up as volunteers to help fight for their beloved fatherland. Paul stays behind with his mother and small sister Gertrud.

Together they try to keep the family's general store afloat until Father and Brother come home. But everything happens differently than planned. The war will end up lasting four years rather than a few months as they'd been told. Paul's family seems on the verge of breaking in pieces. It is the women in Paul's life, his mother, Helene, Louise, and Ida who provide him with orientation and stability during this dramatic time. Inside of him, a question grows more and more urgent: What are the meanings that hide behind all those big words, and which words could someday belong to him?

Since yesterday, there has been peace. Like most girls born in 1913, Hanne was a devoted member of the League of German Girls, a Nazi youth group. When the war ended, nothing she was brought up to believe was true anymore. Adam, an English soldier, is one of the occupying troops in her village. Hanne is the first to notice: something that no one would have thought possible just a short time ago starts to develop between Julia, her best friend, and the young Englishmen.

Freedom instead of dictatorship, listening to your own thoughts and feelings, choosing the path you want for your life - for Hanne this is a whole new experience. She unveils a curiosity within herself for life and love.
